Research on HIV/AIDS in the CSSR (including ASRU), 2012

The Centre for Social Science Research (CSSR) at the University of Cape Town continues to be very active in researching social, economic and political aspects of AIDS. Most of this research is done through the AIDS and Society Research Unit (ASRU), which is one of the units within the CSSR. But the other units in the CSSR also conduct some research. During 2012, CSSR researchers completed the following work:

Books

Articles published in peer-reviewed journals

Nattrass, Nicoli, ‘Understanding the origins and prevalence of AIDS conspiracy beliefs in the United States and South Africa’, Sociology of Health and Illness, published online 25 April 2012.

Working papers

Marshall, Jacqueline, ‘How does being a student in a tertiary educational institution influence condom use in the Western Cape?’ CSSR Working Paper no.301(Cape Town: Centre for Social Science Research, University of Cape Town, 2012).

Vale, Elizabeth, ‘You must make a plan or […] some story’: community health workers’ re-appropriation of the care manual’, CSSR Working Paper no.312 (Cape Town: Centre for Social Science Research, University of Cape Town, 2012).

Dissertations and theses submitted this year

Jury, Catherine, ‘An analysis of the changing nature of households of Khayelitsha residents living on highly active antiretroviral therapy’, Honours long paper, School of Economics; given a distinction (2012); supervised by Nicoli Nattrass.

Other publications

Geffen, Nathan, ‘A court case and a model show how poor conditions are fueling a TB epidemic in prisons’, HIV Treatment Bulletin South (28 February 2012).

Geffen, Nathan, ‘No increased risk of non-AIDS deaths from cumulative use of ART in EuroSIDA cohort’, HIV Treatment Bulletin (1 Feb 2012).

Websites